61. On June 19, 2003, the Commission granted precautionary measures on behalf of Eduardo Nicolás Cuadra Bravo in the context of petition No. 0215/2000, pending before the IACHR, which refers to the alleged violation of his right to social security arising from the unlawful application of a legal regime. The information available indicates that the beneficiary suffers from problems of occlusive bilobular benign prostatic hyperplasia, and that he had positive results for the hepatitis B core test, accordingly he is in need of urgent and adequate medical care to safeguard his personal integrity. The petitioner alleges that because of the situation alleged in his petition, he does not have the resources needed to pay for the medical treatment that his disease requires. In view of the beneficiary's situation, the IACHR asked the Peruvian State to adopt measures to prevent irreparable harm to Mr. Cuadra Bravo's health, so as to preserve his personal integrity, including the medical care needed, until the Commission rules on the merits of his petition. In response, the State reported on the medical care provided to the beneficiary in order to prevent irreparable harm to his health.
