1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the former Yugoslavia since 1991 (“Appeals Chamber” and “Tribunal”, respectively) is seized of the “Defence Request Seeking Provisional Release on the Grounds of Compassion with Confidential Annexes” (“Request”), filed confidentially by Pavle Strugar (“Strugar”) on 18 March 2008. The Office of the Prosecutor (“Prosecution”) responded on 20 March 2008, opposing the Request.¹ Strugar replied on 26 March 2008.²

2. On 31 January 2005, Trial Chamber II convicted Strugar pursuant to Article 7(3) of the Tribunal’s Statute (“Statute”) for the crimes of attacks on civilians and of destruction or wilful damage done to institutions dedicated to religion, charity and education, the arts and sciences, historic monuments and works of art and science under Article 3 of the Statute.³ It sentenced Strugar to eight years’ imprisonment.⁴ The Appeals Chamber is currently seized of the appeals against the Trial Judgement filed by both parties.⁵

I. APPLICABLE LAW

3. Pursuant to Rule 65(I) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal (“Rules”), a convicted person may bring an application seeking provisional release for a fixed period. By virtue of Rule 107 of the Rules, the whole of Rule 65 applies mutatis mutandis to applications brought before the Appeals Chamber under this provision.⁶ Rule 65(I) of the Rules thus provides that the Appeals Chamber may grant provisional release if it is satisfied that (i) the convicted person, if released, will either appear at the hearing of the appeal or will surrender into detention at the conclusion of the fixed period, as the case may be; (ii) the convicted person, if released, will not pose a danger to any victim, witness or other person, and; (iii) special circumstances exist warranting such release. These requirements must be considered cumulatively.⁷ The Appeals

Chamber recalls that “whether an applicant satisfies these requirements is to be determined on a balance of probabilities, and the fact that an individual has already been sentenced is a matter to be taken into account by the Appeals Chamber when balancing the probabilities.”⁸

II. DISCUSSION

A. Preliminary Matters

4. The Appeals Chamber notes that Strugar seeks the right to reply under Rule 126 bis of the Rules.⁹ The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Practice Direction on Procedure for the Filing of Written Submissions in Appeal Proceedings Before the International Tribunal¹⁰ does not require the moving party in a motion filed during an appeal from judgement to seek leave prior to filing a reply and that it was therefore unnecessary for Strugar to do so.¹¹ However, the same provision of the Practice Direction specifies that a reply should be filed within four days of the filing of the response, meaning that the Reply should have been filed by 25 March 2008, and that it is therefore untimely. The Appeals Chamber has previously ruled that even though no good cause for a late filing was shown, it could still be found admissible in the interest of justice bearing in mind “the persistent confusion with regards to the applicable rules of procedure in appeals proceedings” despite previous clarifications made by the Appeals Chamber on a number of occasions.¹² In the present case, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Reply meaningfully clarifies Strugar’s position on the matter and will thus accept to consider the arguments contained therein.

B. Arguments of the Parties

5. In his Request, Strugar seeks provisional release for a period of time not exceeding ten days between 20 March 2008 and 20 April 2008 in order to visit his brother and sister in Belgrade, who are respectively 73 and 87 years old and very ill.¹³ He submits that his brother is in “a deplorable state of health” and that [REDACTED].¹⁴ He further submits that his sister is [REDACTED]. suffers from [REDACTED] and other symptoms and diseases making her fully dependant on the care of others.¹⁵ Strugar annexes medical certificates of his brother's and sister's respective conditions.¹⁶ Given these factors, Strugar submits that the state of health and age of his respective siblings does not allow them to travel and visit him at the United Nations Detention Unit in The Hague.¹⁷ He adds that considering the circumstances, a provisional release could be the last and only opportunity for him to see his siblings alive.¹⁸

6. Strugar further submits that provisional release for a fixed period on compassionate grounds has been granted in other cases before the Tribunal upon showing special circumstances pursuant to Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.¹⁹ In his view, the illnesses and age of his siblings constitute a special circumstance in this case because of the "unpredictability of the time both [he] and his siblings have left remaining to live".²⁰

7. Finally, Strugar reiterates his prior full compliance with the conditions imposed on him by the Tribunal during his previous releases and claims that his age and poor state of health "render any prospect of his flight highly unlikely".²¹ In this regard, Strugar provides the address where he would stay in Belgrade, if released²² and affirms having submitted a request to obtain guarantees from the Republic of Serbia, which he would present, upon receipt, in the form of an addendum to his Request.²³ To date, the Appeals Chamber has not received such an addendum.

8. The Prosecution responds that Strugar fails to demonstrate the existence of special circumstances in the sense of Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.²⁴ According to the Prosecution, such circumstances only exist "when there is acute justification such as a medical need for the Appellant himself or a memorial service for a near family member".²⁵ The Prosecution adds that the decisions referred to by Strugar do not support his Request as the circumstances of those cases were considerably different from the ones at hand, as here there is no evidence that the condition of either of Strugar's siblings is fatal.²⁶

9. Strugar replies that nothing in the Rules limits the notion of "special circumstances" "solely to cases where 'there is acute justification such as a medical need for the Appellant himself or a memorial service for a near family member', or where the state of a family member is 'fatal'".²⁷ He accordingly argues that there can be many other situations which the Appeals Chamber may consider, in the exercise of its discretion, as constituting "special circumstances" in the sense of Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.²⁸ He further refers to a number of decisions taken by the Tribunal's Trial Chambers allowing for provisional release on comparable grounds²⁹ and reiterates that the medical conditions of his respective siblings resulting in their inability to visit him in The Hague and the "arguable time" that they have "left in this life" fully amount to "special circumstances" under Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.³⁰

C. Analysis

10. The Appeals Chamber recalls that Strugar has already served more than half of the sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber.³¹ The Appeals are currently scheduled to be heard on 23 April 2008, and the Appeals Judgement will be rendered in due time thereafter.

11. As recalled above, "[t]he specificity of the appeal stage is reflected by Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules, which provides for an additional criterion, i.e. that 'special circumstances exist warranting such release'".³² In this regard, the Appeals Chamber emphasizes that the fact that some accused have been granted provisional release for comparable reasons pending their trial³³ cannot be

²⁸ Ibid., paras 8, 10, 14.

²⁹ Ibid., paras 11-12.

³⁰ Ibid., para. 13.

³¹ The fact that Strugar has served approximately 54% of the sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber is not sufficient to be considered as a special circumstance under Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules – cf. Prosecutor v. Mile Mrkšić and Veselin Šljivančanin, Case No. IT-95-13/1-A, Decision on the Motion of Veselin Šljivančanin for Provisional Release, 11 December 2007, p. 3 (almost 90% of the sentence served at the moment of application for provisional release on appeal); Prosecutor v. Enver Hadžihasanović and Amir Kubura, Case No. IT-01-47-A, Decision on Motion on Behalf of Enver Hadžihasanović for Provisional Release, 20 June 2007, para. 13 (two-thirds of the sentence served); Prosecutor v. Miroslav Kvočka et al., Case No. IT-98-30/1-A Decision on the Request for Provisional Release of Miroslav Kvočka, 17 December 2003, p. 3 (around 80% of the sentence served).

³² Brđanin Decision citing Simić Decision of 21 October 2004.

automatically applied by analogy to persons who have already been convicted by a Trial Chamber and who are seeking provisional release pending the appellate proceedings.³⁴ Moreover, the Appeals Chamber has repeatedly reiterated that the discretionary assessments of the requirements under Rule 65 are made on a case-by-case basis.³⁵ Therefore, Strugar's arguments concerning the comparison of his situation with that of the accused pending trial in the Prosecutor v. Milutinović et al. case (IT-05-87-T) cannot be seen as determinative.

12. In situations where an application for provisional release is made pending the appellate proceedings, the Appeals Chamber has concluded that special circumstances related to humane and compassionate considerations exist where there is an acute justification, such as the applicant's medical need or a memorial service for a close family member.³⁶ The Appeals Chamber has also granted provisional release for a visit to a close family member in "extremely poor health and whose death is believed to be imminent".³⁷ While the Appeals Chamber agrees with Strugar that there is no finite list of situations which may qualify as special circumstances for the purposes of Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules, it considers the notion of acute justification to be inextricably linked to the scope of special circumstances which could justify provisional release on compassionate grounds at the appellate stage of the proceedings before the Tribunal. It is precisely for that reason that justifications such as wanting to spend time with family³⁸ or to visit a close relative in poor health condition³⁹ have explicitly not been recognized as special circumstances under Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.

13. Strugar argues that special circumstances justifying his provisional release at the present stage of the proceedings exist because his siblings are both in very poor health and are of advanced age, which renders the amount of time for him to see them alive highly unpredictable. However, the submitted medical evidence neither demonstrates how the illnesses and age qualify as an acute crisis⁴⁰ nor suggests that Strugar's siblings' respective medical conditions can be described as life-threatening. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber concludes that Strugar has not shown the existence of special circumstances within the meaning of Rule 65(I)(iii) of the Rules.

14. In light of the above and because the requirements under Rule 65(I) of the Rules are cumulative, the Appeals Chamber need not consider whether the requirements of Rules 65(I)(i) or 65(I)(ii) are met in the present case.⁴¹
