IV. STATEMENT OF FACT

IV. 1. Court Conviction

The Court formed its conviction, on the following means of evidence:

On the entire admission of guilt of the accused Marcurious José de Deus and without reservations, which is considered as valid and relevant by the Court, on the terms and for the effect of the article 29-A of Regulation 2000/30 and yet on his statements in the hearing, as well as the evidences attached to the proceedings that supports the same admission of guilt namely:

- the statements of the witnesses Francisco de Araújo, Cândido dos Santos, Graciano da Cruz e Marianos João,
- the documents of pgs. 160 and 344 to 346 of the preceedings.

The admission of guilt of the accused supported by the referred evidences, allow us to consider proven the facts above referred with no doubts at all.

V. LEGAL CAUSE

V. 1. Legal Identification of Facts

As it has been referred the accused integrally admitted guilt without reserve for the facts to him imputed as well as the respective crime.

Such admission of guilt implies that the Court consider proven the crime imputed to the accused and that he may be convicted for such crime, as it result from the article 29A.2 of UNTAET Regulation 2000/30.¹

Therefore the accused Marcurious José de Deus committed a crime of a crime of murder with premeditation, foreseen and punished by article 340 of the Indonesian Penal Code (KUHP), with reference to article 8 of UNTAET Regulation 2000/15.

V. 2. Decision on the punishment.

The homicide crime with premeditation is punishable for up to twenty (20) years imprisonment.

In determining the real punishment the Court shall take into consideration the fault of the accused and the punishment shall never surpass this fault, understood this as a base for the application of any sanction.

From the facts given as proved turn out to be that the accused acted pursuant to an order. This circumstance shall not relieve the accused from his criminal responsibility but it may be considered in mitigation (article 21 of Regulation 2000/15).²

This circumstance together with the entire admission of guilt of the accused without reserve, as well as his regret and collaboration with the authorities takes the Court to conclude in a mitigation of punishment

This particular mitigation of punishment is still based on the young age of the accused at the time he committed the facts (22 years of age in 1999) and the scenery of particular climate of violence experienced in East Timor during 1999, in which the accused found himself involved in, perhaps compelled by this very youthfulness and the propitiatory circumstances of violence that was going on.

All these allegations are valid and true.

However, we shall not forget the other side of the situation or of the victims and their suffering.

Violence is something that always followed mankind along the history and is part of the common legacy of peoples.

Nevertheless, the 1999 violence in East Timor surpasses this common violence breaking the beast and skipping the mid man's understanding.

For the case in judgment, and avoiding to drag on East Timor recent past beyond the strictly necessary, the intensity of the malice is high (direct malice), as well as the lawlessness showed on circumstances non integrating of the type but that result from the execution of the fact. In this aspect it is particularly relevant that the crime has been perpetrated when the victim was crying the death of her son and the accused to have persisted with the aggression striking several stabbings.

In comparing between the mitigating circumstances and the degree of lawlessness of the fact that the court shall find out the fair sentence for the crime committed by the accused, which shall never surpass his fault.

The Court, on the absence of a legal criterion to determine the measurement of the punishment established on Indonesian Penal Code (KUHP), shall also take into consideration the personal conditions of the accused resulting from the proven facts, as well as the rest of the decisions uttered by the East Timor courts.

Therefore, taking into account all these factors, the court decide to sentence the accused Marcurious José de Deus with the sanction of five (5) years imprisonment.
